Ace that phone interview!

Get a call back on that job application? Congrats! Now prepare yourself for the latest growing trend in hiring: the phone interview. With an avalanche of applicants applying for openings, more and more employers are relying on a pre-meeting phone conversation to whittle down candidates. Pass the test easily with these tips:

● Pop a cough drop!

Five minutes before your scheduled call, suck on a throat drop. The soothing lozenge will help keep your voice smooth and combat the dry mouth that often accompanies nervousness.

● Use this phone!

Stick to a land line so you're guaranteed the best connection and you'll avoid any dropped calls or service issues that could hamper the interview.

● Stay standing!

Take a cue from professional speakers and walk around the room. The trick automatically helps you sound more confident, with the slight movement keeping your thoughts flowing freely.

● Put away the p.j.'s!

Your attire can have subtle influences on how you feel: Wear pajamas, and your tone of voice may automatically come across as too casual. But don a nice outfit, and you'll subconsciously present yourself as more professional.

Tip! Before the interview, do a Google search to find a photo of the person you'll be speaking with. Glancing at their image during your talk will help make the conversation more natural.

The drink that can make you rich!

Facing a big financial decision? Drink a soda first—regular diet—and you'll be more likely to choose the most money-savvy option. The finding from a new study by researchers at the University of South Dakota says the sugary drink boosts blood glucose levels to ensure your brain is working at its peak. And that, in turn, keeps you more focused on long-term goals instead of immediate gratification.

Don't miss these savings!

The easiest coupons to cash in should be the ones stuck right on the package. But here's a shocker: 60% are never redeemed! Blame the checkout rush, when it's easy for the cashier and the shopper to forget. So how can you be sure to never miss out on savings? Simply stash any item with a coupon in the basket of your car, then place them last in line to be scanned. That way, you're more likely to be paying attention (instead of unloading) and can ensure the savings get swiped!

Don't throw that away!

Turn a rubber band into a toolbox treasure!

Hate tossing out those thick rubber bands that bundle together veggies you buy at the grocery store? Toss 'em into your toolbox to turn them into DIY helpers! The bands are perfect for screws with worn-down heads that won't budge.

Just place one between a screwdriver and the screw head, apply pressure, twist and presto! The extra-thick band fills in the gaps, helping the tool grip the stripped indent of the screw head and giving it enough traction to remove the screw.
